

Help Harold Baker with a new Invention

In Val Rutt's story The Race for the Lost Keystone Kate and Phil stay with their Great Aunt Elizabeth in New York where they meet Harold Baker, scientist and inventor. Harold's inventions make life easier and more fun and even the most unlikely things become possible. What would you invent to make your life easier and more exciting?

From The Race for the Lost Keystone page 61

In both their bedrooms Harold had installed his new invention, which he called a 'Dried-and-dressed'. While staying with Great Aunt Elizabeth neither Kate nor Phil needed to think about washing, brushing their teeth or even what to wear. Each morning they chose how to dress by making a selection on a touch-screen keypad set into a revolving door that stood discreetly in the corner of each room. They would then disappear inside, only to reappear, a few moments later, comfortably dressed and sparkling clean.

It could be a new way to travel, an amazing new entertainment experience or something practical like self-cleaning pavements. Describe your ideas for a new invention here and draw a design above.
